

29 October 2019

FIFA WOMEN'S WORLD CUP 2023

Within the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, the National Security Group has responsibility for coordinating and facilitating a whole-of-government approach to domestic and external security. Within New Zealand, the Commissioner of Police has prime responsibility for domestic security.

Attached are two papers that outline the approach to security management in New Zealand and explain the role of government departments and agencies.

New Zealand organisations responsible for security have a proven record of professionalism and competence. As demonstrated with the other major international events successfully hosted in New Zealand.

We undertake to continue this approach to providing security for the FIFA Women's World Cup 2023.

Tony Lynch
Deputy Chief Executive
National Security Group

Enclosures:

1. Statement on the approach to security management in New Zealand
2. The roles of Government Departments and Agencies