Tēnā koe

I refer to your Official Information Act 1982 (OIA) request received on 3 June 2024, in which you requested:

While Police have oversight and control over the issuance of infringement notices, there are private companies who operate and maintain fixed and mobile speed cameras on behalf of Police, and who also provide the software and systems used to process and issue infringement tickets. For example, this includes instances where Police enforcement officers may require a driver to stop, and where 'side-of-the-road' tickets may be generated and processed for service.

Please give a complete list of all private companies contracted by Police to provide the aforesaid services (via the use of electronic software and systems) to support Police's speed enforcement processes.

No third party is contracted to operate speed detection equipment or issue infringement offence notices on behalf of Police. However, our processes are supported by a number of auxiliary functions in which Police uses the services of third parties. These auxiliary functions and the respective vendors are listed in Table 1.

I trust this information is satisfactory in answering your request.
