A1. Purpose and any background information

Investigate the impact of changes to traffic management strategies in Auckland on FENZ's ability to provide emergency response and operations. We understand that, while you have many concerns, the five main areas are:

- 1. Traffic calming (e.g., speed humps, road narrowing)*
- 2. Removal of minimum parking requirements*
- 3. Reducing speed limits*
- 4. Traffic congestion*
- 5. Other changes to transport strategy that impact FENZ operations (such as light rail and rail crossings)*

MRCagney is well placed to assist with this project as we are experts on how Auckland's streets and neighbourhoods are currently transforming and how planning changing are likely to impact future transformation. We also have capability to perform robust data analysis and visualise findings in a way that is accessible to all audiences.

We will deliver a report that can be used to inform FENZ's submissions to government as well as an evidence base for discussion with decision-makers around traffic calming proposals. This report will outline the impact of changes to the roading network and urban planning on FENZ operations. We will use existing evidence from Auckland and elsewhere, a qualitative analysis of the four areas identified above, a quantitative analysis of the impact of traffic calming, and a discussion of future areas of concern that should be investigated.

If time and budget allow, there is scope for additional work and/or deliverables to be performed, as described in Section 2, Task 5.

Offer of Service

To:	Antonia Butler	Of:	Fire and Emergency New Zealand
From:	9(2)(a)	Date:	27 April 2022
Copies:	9(2)(a)
Project:	Impact of Rooding Interventions on FENZ
Subject:	Offer of Service

1 Introduction and Project Background

Fire and Emergency New Zealand (FENZ) has asked MRCagney (NZ) Limited to prepare an offer of service to investigate the impact of changes to traffic management strategies in Auckland on FENZ's ability to provide emergency response and operations. We understand that, while you have many concerns, the five main areas are:

1. Traffic calming (e.g., speed humps, road narrowing)
2. Removal of minimum parking requirements
3. Reducing speed limits
4. Traffic congestion
5. Other changes to transport strategy that impact FENZ operations (such as light rail and rail crossings)

MRCagney is well placed to assist with this project as we are experts on how Auckland's streets and neighbourhoods are currently transforming and how planning changing are likely to impact future transformation. We also have capability to perform robust data analysis and visualise findings in a way that is accessible to all audiences.

We will deliver a report that can be used to inform FENZ's submissions to government as well as an evidence base for discussion with decision-makers around traffic calming proposals. This report will outline the impact of changes to the roading network and urban planning on FENZ operations. We will use existing evidence from Auckland and elsewhere, a qualitative analysis of the four areas identified above, a quantitative analysis of the impact of traffic calming, and a discussion of future areas of concern that should be investigated.

If time and budget allow, there is scope for additional work and/or deliverables to be performed, as described in Section 2, Task 5.

2 Project Scope

This section outlines the proposed scope of work to complete the project. Here, we detail the specific tasks we will perform, any associated deliverables, and required FENZ inputs. We are proposing to perform both primary and secondary research to help FENZ better understand their concerns around traffic interventions and the impact on service quality and response times.

2.1 Task 1—Preliminary discovery

Task 1 is preliminary discovery work. FENZ has already provided 20+ pieces of academic literature and more than 10 pieces of feedback and/or submissions on proposed roading changes and strategies. This first task is to review FENZ's questions and concerns about how changes to Auckland's infrastructure could impact on FENZ's services, personnel, fleet and equipment, community, or the environment.

We will compare the largest areas of concerns to existing literature (both supplied by FENZ and found through our own research) to provide an outside perspective to what are likely to be the initiatives (changes in roading, changes in urban form, urban transport trends) with the biggest impact on FENZ.

This task will also include data collection from FENZ and confirmation of the data available. The next task on data cleaning and analysis hinges on the availability and completeness of that data. We will also work with Auckland Transport to identify the areas of the city that have already received traffic calming treatments or other relevant interventions and characterise the type and extent of the interventions.

We will meet with FENZ representatives to report our finding and discuss any areas of concern. We will discuss our findings on where the biggest impact on FENZ operations is likely to come from. We can also provide, if requested, a "mini gap analysis" in the form of a memo that identifies any potential urban form and urban transport trends that have been so far unidentified as potentially impacting FENZ operations.

2.2 Task 2 – Qualitative analysis

Task 2 will be a qualitative analysis of likely impacts of traffic calming interventions, the removal of parking minimum requirements, changes to transport strategies, and the lowering of speed limits. It is likely that each of these will impact on FENZ's in various ways – both positive and negative. We will use the latest research, development patterns, and examples from other cities to provide independent advice on the likely impacts and areas of concern.

2.3 Task 3 – Quantitative analysis of traffic calming

Task 3 will consist of an analysis of FENZ data. The first step for Task 3 will be the determination of different datasets, cleaning and pre-processing by MRCagney's Data Science Team. Dependent on the depth, scope, and quality of the data, we will then look to perform a "with or without you" (WOWY) analysis on certain types of traffic calming interventions. A WOWY analysis attempts to identify the performance of one type of intervention alone and in combinations with other interventions. By comparing available data including response, fleet impacts and health and safety in areas with one intervention with areas with two (or more) interventions, the impact of each intervention can be isolated.

If the data is inadequate for a WOWY analysis, we will endeavour to perform the best statistically robust analysis possible with the data available.

The scope of work for this task will include the following:

- Data set determination (this is really a conversation with our Planning and Performance Manager about what we hold that could inform the analysis and the compilation of this material for you)
- Data cleaning and pre-processing
- Identification of traffic interventions that have been put in place during the period of time covered by FENZ data (focussing on speed humps and other "traffic calming" devices. This would be done in collaboration with Auckland Transport, where necessary.
- Analysis on the likely impact of specific traffic interventions
- A WOWY analysis (if possible) on the impact of traffic interventions in combination
 - This step is dependent on finding examples of interventions that have been put in place alone and in combination with other interventions during the period of time covered by FENZ data. (Safer Speeds programme interventions in the Counties Manukau area could be a good example for this)

Task 3 client inputs are primarily the delivery of as much data that is held by FENZ. This need not necessarily be limited to data for Auckland, as there could be traffic interventions in other areas that will provide good examples for our case studies.

The outputs of Task 3 will be a cleaned and ready-to-use datasets, and a meeting with FENZ representatives to discuss our findings in the case studies.

2.4 Task 4 – Summary document

Task 4 will consist of writing a summary document that outlines our findings from our primary and secondary research tasks outlined above. This document will allow FENZ to better articulate their concerns and focus future feedback and submissions on the areas that are likely to matter most to FENZ.

The deliverable for Task 4 will be a report that is easily read and understood by the client and able to be used to inform future submissions from FENZ to central and local government.

This document will summarise the qualitative and quantitative analyses and provide recommendations for future research areas.

2.5 Task 5 – Future work to be agreed

Because the nature of this work, the time and resources to accomplish Tasks 1 through 4 could be highly variable dependent upon the quality of the data provided by FENZ. For this task, we propose that we allow for MRCagney and FENZ to mutually agree to any further tasks on a time and expenses basis based on the rates of those involved in the project (below). This work could look at the next set of concerns coming down the line. This is likely to include initial quantitative analysis of issues such as the impact of parking minimum removals, proposed changes to transport strategies, or lowering of speed limits.

3 Assumptions and Exclusions

The following assumptions and exclusions have been identified for this project:

- We assume timely delivery of raw data
- We assume the raw data requires only normal levels of cleaning and pre-processing
- We assume no additional data collection will be required
- This will be limited to a desk top review
- No detailed design
- No construction plans
- No public engagement
- There will be one inception meeting, one meeting to discuss the findings from Task 1, one meeting for Task 2, and a Final meeting to discuss Task 4. There is potential for an additional meeting for the inception of Task 5.
- This assumes one round of feedback on draft report from Task 4 prior to finalising.

4 Project Team

MRCagney is a sustainable transportation consultancy. We are specialist consultants and advisers on urban design, transport planning, transit, transport strategy and research, technology, GIS, and analytics. Our team is passionate about delivering better transport, better places and better choices for our clients and the communities in which we work.

We specialise in urban matters and provide conceptual solutions to transport, housing, and development challenges for the cities in which we work and live. Our goal is to make towns and cities better places for everyone. We pride ourselves on focusing on public transport projects and prioritising walking and cycling.

We have been in business since 2000 and have strong relationships with local and central government as well as a range of private clients. We stand for well connected, vibrant and liveable places, and for giving all people better, more sustainable travel choices, now and into the future.

Our project team for this work includes the following staff MRCagney staff:

9(2)(a), Principal Economist, PhD. 9(2)(a) will be the primary point of contact for this work. 9(2)(a) has a wealth of experience as an economist, particularly in the fields of transport and urban economics. This experience includes modelling Auckland's housing and land markets, land-use regulation changes, freight and traveller demand, value of travel time, pedestrian movements, and economic impacts of government policy decisions. He has worked on projects in New Zealand and the United States and has previously served on a standing committee of the Transportation Research Board of the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine in the US.

What sets 9(2)(a) apart from many economists is his ability to communicate complex concepts and modelling results to non-economist audiences. While at Auckland Council's Chief Economist Unit, where he worked for several years, including a stint as Chief Economist, 9(2)(a) was a primary contact for Auckland's elected members and senior staff on economic matters. He has published his work across several academic journals as well as written a series of general-audience papers on the issues around housing and transport economics in New Zealand.

9(2)(a), Principal Transport Planner. 9(2)(a) has become a recognised specialist in the design of public transport networks based on recent work on significant New Zealand and Australian projects. 9(2)(a) was a key planner in Auckland's comprehensive New Network public transport system redesign. He has since provided network design and infrastructure guidance for multi-modal public transport systems across New Zealand and Australia, including acting as public transport planning lead on major public transport projects for the city.

9(2)(a) Senior Consultant. 9(2)(a) has extensive experience leading and providing expert advice on a range of transport planning and urban regeneration projects, including parking management strategies, walking and cycling network planning and design, town centre masterplans, urban street design, and public space upgrades. 9(2)(a) passion is helping convert transport policy and strategies into tangible improvements in the way our cities are designed and built. His experience with the future directions of urban traffic planning make him particularly well-suited for this project. 9(2)(a) has recently joined MRCagney after ten years in the public sector working across several key roles.

9(2)(a) Transport Planner and Analyst. 9(2)(a) has experience in data science, public transport planning, mathematical modelling, simulation, algorithm development and operations research. 9(2)(a) has conducted network-wide public transport data analysis, performed urban realm economic analysis, carried out multi-modal corridor design, and visualised comprehensive micro-mobility data. He is passionate about interpreting and visualising data to construct compelling stories to help us live and move efficiently and sustainably. He will be the primary data wrangler for this project.
